HOPEFUL ACTION FOR IMMIGRANTS AT THE CAPITOL

Full of Hope,

Our local and federal immigration laws must be characterized by the principles of justice, fairness, mercy, and respect. Changing these laws is not just about helping immigrants; it is about respecting human dignity and about creating community for all of us. We can imagine the society we want to live in: immigrants and non-immigrants living together in a richly diverse community; we have no fear of those who are different; we are confident that we can all share in the abundance of God; and we live in a world of justice. We cannot realize this vision without first changing the immigration laws of this country.
